Instructions

- Salaried government regulators - Any person employed by or employed on a salaried basis with a state/federal insurance regulatory agency is eligible for membership, provided said person's responsibilities include examination, either in the field or the office, of insurance company products and/or operations.
- Contract regulators - A regulator employed under contract or appointment by a state/federal regulatory agency, as defined in the Society's bylaws, may also seek membership if such employment represents at least 75% of the examiner's work. Each applicant for IRES membership must designate a primary state for which the applicant does regulatory work, even if the applicant is an independent examiner whose work assignments change regularly.
- Former members - Those former members of IRES holding AIE or CIE designations who wish to re-join IRES will be required to pay dues fees designated for AIEs and CIEs, and to comply with all current mandatory continuing education requirements in order to maintain such designations. Questions regarding the National IRES Continuing Education (N.I.C.E.) Program may be directed to the IRES office at 913-768-IRES (4737).
- Retired status - IRES "retired" status is reserved for any member who has ceased to be actively engaged in any aspect of the field of insurance. Retired Members are entitled to reduced annual dues (see below).
- Non-Voting Member - General Members of IRES who leave regulation to work in the insurance industry may apply for non-voting general membership. Non-voting members pay full annual dues. They also may maintain their AIE/CIE designations, providing they remain in compliance with IRES continuing education requirements.
- Dues levels - A check made payable to INSURANCE REGULATORY EXAMINERS SOCIETY should accompany each application. Annual dues are: $75 for a general member without a designation; $100 for a general member with an AIE designation; $110 for a general member with a CIE designation; and $45 for a retired member.
